Assad Was About to Announce a Power-sharing Deal with Political Opposition (not the terrorists) So We Whacked Him

Bashar al Assad was setting up an historic press statement to tell the people of Syria he was going to share power with the political opposition in Syria so, as the cameras were being set up... the official story is... he ran away leaving staffers and family members without saying a word. Hmmm. And look at the cast of characters this bullshit story comes from: his sellout Prime Minister, al Qaeda, the MEK and Kurds from Iraq... and of course... our man in Turkey, Hakan Fidan. And the NYT publishes this bullshit without one single critical thought as to the sheer stupidity of it all.

from the New York Times

As rebels advanced toward the Syrian capital of Damascus on Dec. 7, the staff in the hilltop Presidential Palace prepared for a speech they hoped would lead to a peaceful end to the 13-year civil war.

Aides to President Bashar al-Assad were brainstorming messaging ideas. A film crew had set up cameras and lights nearby. Syria's state-run television station was ready to broadcast the finished product: an address by Mr. al-Assad announcing a plan to share power with members of the political opposition, according to three people who were involved in the preparation.

Working from the palace, Mr. al-Assad, who had wielded fear and force to maintain his authoritarian rule over Syria for more than two decades, had betrayed no sense of alarm to his staff, according to a palace insider whose office was near the president's.

The capital's defenses had been bolstered, Mr. al-Assad's aides were told, including by the powerful 4th Armored Division of the Syrian Army, led by the president's brother Maher al-Assad, the insider said.

They had all been deceived.

*After dusk, the president slipped out of the capital, flying covertly to a Russian military base in northern Syria and then on a Russian jet to Moscow, according to six Middle Eastern government and security officials...

The account of Mr. al-Assad's fall, much of which has not been previously reported, is based on interviews with Syrian (pro-US opposition and his Prime Minister?), Iranian (MEK?), Iraqi (Iraqi Kurdistan?) and Turkish officials (US asset Hakan Fidan); Damascus-based diplomats; as well as associates of Mr. al-Assad and rebels who participated in his ouster (al Qaeda terrorists). Many of them spoke on the condition of anonymity

Assad was doing what he had been told to do by the advisors from places like Turkey and Egypt. He was making a deal to share power with the legitimate opposition in Turkey. But that wasn't enough. As Jeffrey Sachs recently put it, Israel had other plans for that land. They wanted it for Greater Israel and a power sharing deal would not permit that so... we whacked him and concocted this bullshit story about him setting all this up then just taking a powder.

As I have said before, if he would alive he would have done an interview by now and they damn sure wouldn't have come out with that stupid Telegram message from him because they would have known he would come out and discredit it.

Again, what you have here is a little truth bleeding out of their lies. Assad was setting up to share power and put an end to the JUSTIFICATION for the rebellion.

And we and Glorious Israel couldn't have that... so we killed him perhaps hours or minutes before his scheduled address to the nation telling them of his plans.

His plans to remain.

They had to act fast and now they are trying to cover their tracks but part of what gives them away are their 'sources' for this story all of whom stand to gain from Assad being removed and Syria being handed over to Israel.

The MEK in Iran want an Iranian ally gone because it weakens them and readies them for their own regime change.

The Iraqi 'officials' undoubtedly from Iraqi Kurdistan who are working toward the Greater Kurdistan project and are aligned with Israel.

Syrian officials like their Prime Minister who seemed ready to hand over the keys to the kingdom to al Qaeda terrorists before Assad was even out the door.

And of course, the 'Turkish official' being Hakan Fidan who is a well known asset of US intelligence and the CIA who thinks doing this one more service to the Americans will buy him Erdogan's job after we regime change Turkey.

It's bullshit. Bashar al Assad is dead as is his brother Maher.

We killed them so Israel could steal more land from it's neighbors. That's just a fact.

These are the birth pangs of the New Middle East. Don't be fooled. And stop lying about it.

All we've seen so far about Assad are stories. No interviews, no evidence whatsoever that he is really in Moscow, just stories in the media, the fully controlled media. Why would that be? Makes no sense

So this story might well be correct. It's a definite possibility. Time will tell I suppose, it will be interesting to see how this plays out
